WHAT IS THE MYSTERIOUS BLACK LINE IN FRONT OF THE PLANE?

It seems like advanced scalar technology, but it also looks like it might just be a shadow of the chemtrail cast against the surrounding aerosols. The position of the sun and plane were such at the time of this photo that we thought this could account for it. However, we've received correspondence from a trusted source who says they've seen black lines when the position of the sun could not account for it, and that these dark lines are strongly indicative of particle-beams which would be greatly enhanced by the addition of aerosol-ized metallic elements.

I photographed the black line here a while back. I adjusted the contrast to make it show a little better. It wasn't there at first and really appeared to be coming right out of the front of the craft. It looked turned on - I saw the whole thing. I have seen this frontal beam thing once more and it appeared to be from the front of the jet and not a shadow. Both times, including this photo, other jets flew next to the "dark line" jet and they did not have any shadow effect...

"This posting is in response to a previous posting made a couple of weeks ago requesting any new sightings of "tracers" to be posted. I do not have a digital camera, so the best I can do is describe what I saw:

The sighting occurred this morning over Rochester, N.Y. at 7:50 a.m. eastern time. There is obviously a major spraying operation going on above right now and it looks like they are going for total whiteout conditions. The sky is an absolute mess. The "tracer" and its chemtrail counterpart went from southeast to northwest, and upon close examination, this was definitely NOT a shadow, as the sky was full of chemtrails under chemtrails/chemclouds, and this was the only one with a tracer. Also, as the chemtrail started to spread out and become "zig-zag" in certain places, the tracer remained perfectly straight, showing no relationship to the chemtrail above it. And finally, even though this was in the morning, the sun seemed to be at the wrong angle to cast such a shadow either from underneath the chemcloud or from above it. Also of note were two large "X"s. One was created almost directly above downtown Rochester. There's no doubt that this was a deliberate X because the sprayers had been turned on and off, on both pieces of the X at just the right place to prevent any confusion that this might be two overlapping trails. It was a PERFECT X. The other "X" was to the southeast, but one of the jets had not turned off its sprayer, so I'm not 100% sure about this one. And overall, they've made a total mess of the sky, both yesterday afternoon, and this morning also." welcome BigJoe

"Hello Mark, I haven't been here in awhile and don't have permission yet to reply to your thread but I did see something you might be interested in. I have seen my share of black beams in the sky and never had any idea what they were until the war started. Within the first couple of days of the war I was browsing through the news channels for my daily dose of propaganda and believe it or not, cnn showed a clip of a patriot missile test. It showed a ground to air missile flying through the air and the cameras panned out to reveal the classic black beam crossing the sky. Just as the missile intersected the beam a patriot came down and obliterated it. Then the beam just went off. I watched the loop to see if I could catch it again but they didn't replay it. cnn never replays anything of value. Hope this helps. "

Chemtrails And The 'Black Line' In Sweden

From (anonymity requested)

I am sending a photo taken in the countryside of Sweden about a week ago. For about two years , we have had heavy spraying almost every clear day. Usually, you find the same pattern that has been described from all over the world. On the day that this picture was taken, I found a strange dark shadow in front of the plane.

First, I thought that this was some kind of optical illusion. The aircraft followed the dark "shadow- line" in a perfect way, when it all of a sudden made a turn and moved away from it. I realized that this was some kind of line that the plane followed and not at all an illusion created by the plane.

This is exactly what a person on your website wrote about, and it would be interesting to find out if this has been seen elsewhere. I have been watching these chem-trails for a long time, but this was something new.

Regards -
Sweden

Hi Jeff,

I have been reading with interest the messages concerning the black line accompanying chemtrails. While driving from Des Moines to Shenandoah, Iowa (rural Iowa), I saw a black line extend out from a plane I was watching. The subsequent chemtrail followed the black line exactly and then continued its formation without further visible black lines. When I saw the chemtrail following the black line, I thought to myself: "This must be how they are able to create the patterns." (Laugh if you like - I know nothing about navigation.) Then I decided I was seeing things because the chemtrail formation continued without any trace of a black line.

On a different day driving in the same area, I saw the black line already lined up with a chemtrail, and it too seemed to disappear. I was pleased to read that if my mind is playing tricks on me about these darn chemtrails, then I am not the only one having the experience.

Weather here in Iowa has been quite nice lately except for multiple tornadoes last week. I have been watching the chemtrail formation since the first of the year. If it is related to weather control, the good news is that "they" fail at weather manipulation frequently. We have the same pattern of spraying on clear days including Sundays. Today they sprayed rather large plumes but all disappeared by 7:45 p.m.. Other days I have seen the contrails create the gray haze that people speak of. Two times this spring there was heavy spraying for 2 days, followed by 5-7 days of overcast skies. I, unfortunately, had no access to the weather forecast those times but my sense was the spraying contributed mightily.

I have also noticed that they seem to spray with different chemicals in the same day. Some of the trails disappear fairly rapidly and others linger for the rest of the day, fanning into the cirrus clouds and then overcast. I also wonder if they spray here with something on clear days to ward off possible rain activity, contributing to the drought here.

One day, I took the bull by the horns while watching chemtrail formation and called a Des Moines TV station, newspaper and the City government. The TV station was unaware of what I was referring to, the newspaper did not return my call and the government official I spoke with referred me to the aviation dept. at the airport. The aviation person I spoke with had noticed the "contrails" earlier. He told me that contrails lingered and changed into cirrus clouds, especially in humid weather with no winds. That they were not spraying anything. I decided to take the man at his word and investigated what a common encyclopedia had to say on the subject. Two different encyclopedias concurred that contrails can remain for lengthy periods, turning into clouds, etc. "Nancy", I said to myself, "you have let yourself get suckered in again." "These are contrails, not chemtrails."

The following weekend while driving the Des Moines to Shenandoah route again I saw a "normal contrail" below an obvious chemtrail. What I saw matched pictures I have seen on this site. That made a believer out of me that there is a difference between contrails and chemtrails. I have no clue what the purpose of the chemtrails is. I have not experienced illness or allergies. I personally doubt the theory of aerial vaccination because this method would be so incredibly inefficient. On the other hand, I do not trust the government and our leaders are usually not very bright..... so who knows.

Thank you, Jeff, for your great site and for providing an opportunity for us to share information and experience.

Nancy

Hi,

I was really shocked to read about this as I have a very strange experience of this from about 6 years ago.

I was flying to San Francisco from London Heathrow and we were over Greenland at the time when I looked out of the window and noticed a thick translucent black band in the sky. I stared at it for a while unable to work out what I was looking at. It was probably about a mile away from the plane and stretched as far as you could see in a perfectly straight line in both directions.

Suddenly a black 'object' appeared in the middle of the 'corridor' and stopped, turned slightly towards the plane, and then did the strangest thing: it elongated to about 10 times the original size until it was what I can only describe as a stretched out triangle...then instantly accelerated away at a phenomenal speed down the 'corridor'.

My 2 colleauges also witnessed this and were just as puzzled and amazed. Also shortly after just into Canada we noticed a very, very long perfectly straight road through literally nowhere just going on for miles. Suddenly we passed a huge pentagon shaped complex that this road led to with nothing else around. Just this place with buildings and hangars and a runway absolutely in the middle of nowhere.

Very Bizzare.

I'm glad you mentioned about this black line as it's puzzled me ever since I saw it.

Keep up the good work
